As a result of the violent indignation aroused by the Munich surrender we are witnessing in print many fervent expressions of opinions. It is heartening to find authors who still care enough about democracy to feel its fate passionately. Among these philippic two of these discourses are noted, seem to merit the careful attention of all readers—

OUR BATTLE—by Van Loon

Mumford
OUR BATTLE by Hendrik Van Loon: This, as its title implies, is a reply to Adolph Hitler's notorious "Mein Kampf". It is neither satirical nor humorous but written in dead seriousness and at white heat, as a warning to all good lovers of democracy everywhere. The real purpose is to point out to the American people the real and actual danger of the threat of the totalitarian governments to world civilization and Democracies in particular. At the close of the book Van Loon appends a list of Hitler's intentions and his achievement of them.

"Placed together thus, the details are sinister and threatening, and the menace of them nearer to us than most Americans realize. It is written by a man who knows Europe as few Americans know it and whose point of attack is founded upon sound comprehensive knowledge of historical and racial facts," Louis Bromfield says.

"Realizing the necessity of a proper fit to insure the best appearance, we have arranged for Van Loon appends a list of Hitler's intentions and his achievement of them."

"Placed together thus, the details are sinister and threatening, and the menace of them nearer to us than most Americans realize. It is written by a man who knows Europe as few Americans know it and whose point of attack is founded upon sound comprehensive knowledge of historical and racial facts," Louis Bromfield says.

MEN MUST ACT by Lewis Mumford: Perhaps Mumford's plea seems the most balanced. He does not like Van Loon because his invective to Hitler and give Mussolini almost a clean slate. It is an exercise in constructive thinking, with firm basis and proceeds logically in a program of action.

"The whole scheme of fascism and of democracy are fundamentally irreconcilable. The great schism lies here, not between Fascism and Communism which have too much in common, as is becoming increasingly clear each day. The author maintains they are much more than opposed political systems, they are opposed ways of life with contradictory standards of values. The true fascist and true Democrat can scarcely understand each other because the same words carry different meanings to each. Through these are criticisms to be made, the book deserves wide reading for the author has fearlessly suggested a positive policy and positive program instead of a negative policy and a do nothing program which is the conclusion of many present orations."

KINGSMARK by A. E. W. Mason: This is a historical novel with a genuine flair for the picturesque and romantic. Mason as everyone knows is a prince of story tellers. "The Four Feathers" and "At the Villa Rosa" are perennial favorites. In this new work of the 17th century in Hanover, Princess Dorothea, lovely and high spirited, is married against her will to the boorish George Louis of Hanover. Against a background of court intrigue her difficult romance with the brilliant Swedish adventurer, Phillip von Konigsmark, is played out with verve and relish.

Mrs. Helen Rusthoven, Manhattan Beach, for surgery last Thursday, and Antonio Sliernos of this city for medical treatment last Saturday.

Razzle-Dazzle Driver Contrives New Twists

SEMINOLE, Okla. (U.P.)—Highway Patrolman V. C. Wahl learned about razzle-dazzle football when he played for Oklahoma A. and M. College, but a 62-year-old motorist showed him some new twists with a car.

The driver, reported Wahl, did this:

Missed a curve on a highway near here, cut across the front yard of a farm home. He missed the front porch by inches.

Returned to the highway, missed another curve and drove across a field.

Once again returned to the highway, only to ram a sign-board.

Bounced off the sign and side-swiped a culvert. Drove between two cars going in opposite directions.

This last adventure was too tight a squeeze and the three cars crashed, injuring the man and three other persons. But the elderly man's car hadn't stopped. It hurtled into a ditch, traveled 100 yards down the ditch and burrowed into an embankment.

The man's driving license was suspended.
